CITY SEALER HELMS SUBMITS A REPORT

Inspected And Sealed Large Number of Weights And Measures During Last Three Months.

City Sealer Walter Helms has submitted to the city council a report of his inspections and findings during the last three months. Because of the time required by his private business he did not altempt to do as much as during the three months preceding, nevertheless a considerable amount was accomplished. From this report which is given day by day it is learned that he inspected and sealed 176 liquid measures, 35 weights, 2 spring scales, 1 counter scale. 1 counter, 9 platform scales, and parcel post scales at three hardware stores. Six computing scales were re-tested and sealed, 2 platform scales and 4 weights adjusted, 2 spring scales were con-sealed, 2 platform scales and 4 weights adjusted, 2 spring scales were condemned for repairs, and forty liquid measures were condemned.

Several lots of butter prints, in prints offered for sale 2s containing one pound weight were: weighed in lots of five to determine if they were pounds, 5½ ounces; one 5 pounds, 5 ounces, another showed each print to be short from one-half to three-fourths of an ounce, and a third lot of 25 pounds weighed as single pounds was one ounce overweight. Still other pounds weighed as single pounds was one ounce overweight. Still other lots of five prints were three-fourths of an ounce and 2 ownces heavy. No short-measure berry boxes have been found though a number of boxes have been inspected. Only one-half pint pint, and quart sizes are permissible according to the state laws.

But my warning would be useless; what you offered to do just now is warning enough in itself. The man who would sell his own did. Over my body I dared your hire self. The man who would sell his own daughter is capable of anything!"

"Please, Gloria, stop," Wright entreated. "I'm not accustomed to have any one else fight my battles for me I can take care of myself."

"May be you can," sneered the boss but ever since you've been here you've been hidin' behind my daughter. It's because o' her I didn't go after you hot an' heavy long ago. An then when they did come near gittiff' you the other day, she stopped em."
"You, Gloria!" Wright could not understand. She only bowed her head:

"But now, by God! that's all past." Kerr brought his fist down on the table with a bang. His breath came in apoplectic gasps and his face was livid with rage. "She's out of it as fer as I'm concerned. I did every thing in the world fer her, an' it wasn't no use." He turned to his daughter as he hurled out his anger and disappointment between his gaspa for breath. "I was ready to stan' by you to the end, and what do I git fer all my schemin" an' planning' fer you? Nothin' but glum looks an' harsh words. If yer goin' away, go. I disown you. I cast you off."

The girl did not quail beneath his bitter words. They only inflamed her to announce the decision she had already made. Her lip curled with "You disown me! You cast me off! All the contempt she could muster she threw into her voice. "What right have you, who would barter me away as you would a horse or dog? No, it's I disown, you!"

Wright walked over to her and sought to take her hand gently in his, but she drew away. She would stand alone. Like a blind old bear David Kerr semed to grope his way to the door. There he turned to gaze once liore upon the wreck of his latest schemes. His rage was still hot upon him.

"I found you in this-this adventur er's room. I leave you here. Look to yerself, you are no child o' mine," The door banged behind him and Gloria Kerr knew that they had met for the last time. The girl, feeling so miserably alone in the world, turned to find bent upon her the tender gaze of the man whom she had once sworn to follow to the end of the world. For them love was dead, she knew, and now life would be for her only a succession of weary days.

"I thought all but my body died that day we spoke of love to find it but a dream," she acknowledged sadly, "yet there was one cup still more bitter I had to drain-and this was that cup's dregs.

"Oh, Gloria, believe me, out of unhappiness happiness comes. Your place is with me now. I hadn't told you, but I, too, am going away forever. And what is more, I'm going to take you with me." She looked at him in wonder, then

TEX RUSSELL, WHITE SOX RECRUIT, IS THE PITCHING FIND OF THE SEASON

Tex Russell, the pitcher secured by Comiskey from the Fort Worth (Texas) club, is the only White Sox pitcher who stands well up in the percentages. He is pitching better ball than Walsh, Scott or any of the veterans. To date he has pitched in seven games, winning four and losing two. In his last game he out-pitched Bender of the Athletics, but his support was weak and he got on the bad side, 3 to 0. Russell appears to be one of the live wire flingers picked up in the American league

UP TO CONGRESS

If the Minnesota supreme court was the court of last resort, the late decision in the railroad rate case would mean bank maptey to every railroad in the country for Minnesota is only one of forty lour states, where the railroads do can interest the railroads do can interest the railroads. one of forty-lour states, where the railroads do an interstate business, and every last one of them would speedily find cause for action. These conditions, Mr. Chief Justice Hughes—who rendered the decision for the Minnesota court—fully realized. And so he put the responsibility for equitable adjustment up to congress, where it belongs and if our national law-it belongs and it belongs and it belongs and it belongs and it belongs and

WHOLESOME CENSORSHIP

The following paragraph from a Washington dispatch is of interest to all publishers, as well as to the general public. The law was passed a year ago, but a certain class of publishers objected, and carried their contentions to the supreme court where it has just been declared constitutional.

"The validity of the 'newspaper publicity law' enacted in 1912 as a provision of the postal appropriation act, was upheld today by unanimous."

either political or private gain.
Under the old regime, many people have waded through half a column of readable stuff to find near the close of the article that it was written in the interests of some patent medicine, or quack doctor. The new law provides that all this kind of matter, as well as all political endorsement, shall be marked advertising.

It has been customary, in many offices, to claim a circulation much in excess of the number of papers printed, and as proof was neither furnished nor demanded, the advertiser was called on to pay for much more than he received. In any other line of business this would be considered a raud and imposition, and that is just what it means in the newspaper busi-

We have had enough namby pamby excuses, enough glossing over of evil, enough hair splitting over nonessen-tials. We need true souls that will stand for the plain and simple truths of righteousness. We need men of the fiber of oak, who know for what they stand and dare to proclaim it. We need men who seem what they are, who are not one thing to your face and another to your back, who are not here today and there tomorrow. We need those who care more for being right than they do for pleasing every one they meet, who are strong enough and great enough to stand for God and

These are the men who will cut off the head of a king, if necessary, for the benefit of the state. These are the men who will go through a Valley Forge rather than give up their inherent rights. These are the men who will march from Bull Run to Gettysburg that a nation may be saved and a race set free.

They are not of the flashy or dilet-tante sort. They do not pose. They do not shine by reflected light. They are simple and manful, standing humbly and honestly for the truth as they see it. They are the sort of men who read the Bible by the fireside and are not too proud or superior to go down on their knees and pray. They may not profess much religion, but they

God give us men. That is the prayer of a groping and waiting world. We want men who will stand for the good of the race rather than seem to be what they are not, that thereby they may advance their private interests. Give us men that will lead us out of the quagmire of selfishness up to the fair and sunlit plain of brotherhood. We are heartily sick of the mammonistic, materialistic, shifty, insincere and false. We need simple, upright; God filled souls who dare to stand for humanity and for the truth.

The Rusk Lyceum, literary society of the Janesville high school, closed the past year's work lest evening with an elaborate banquet held at the Myer's Hotel. The banquet was the fourteenth given by the society and because of the unique, and original program that was given, surpassed those of previous years. The room was decorated with black and gold, the Rusk colors, and college pennants.

the Rusk colors, and college peunants.

Ralph Soulman, acting president of the society, was toastmaster, and after welcoming the sixteen couples present in "The Start of the Stage Coach." Introduced each speaker on the program in a clever manner. Joseph Ryan gave the toast to the toast to the girls under the title of the "Delightful Little Bits of Feminity We Have With Us." Mr. Ryan's speech contained many witty remarks about the members of the fair sex that were present and was given in a creditable manner. Miss Lucile Hyde responded to the toast in "Their Escorts." Harold Mohr and Frank Blodgett gave the prophecy.

A more serious side of the work of of the Rusk Lyceim was given by Benjamin Kuhlow, who outlined the year's work of the society and the progress which had been made during the last year. Probably the most humorous number on the program was the response John Groat made to the "The Problem of Amusing the High School Girls and Boys of Today." Professor Guy Curtis, critic of the society, proved the most able speaker of the evening and entertained those present with remarks relating to the society's welfere and its future. Mr. Curtis awarded the three medals that are given each year to the three seniors of the society who excel in the numerous ectivities that the Rusk enters into The following were given the fobs: Raibn Soulman. INTERESTING STORY

New Serial Which Starts in Today's issue is intensely interesting From Openhad Chapter.

When Hariret Ford, J. O. Higgins and Detective Burns produced the Argyle Case on the stage it was most constructed by J. W. McConaughy and loses not one bit of the interesting comax of the various acts of the play. It is a mystery play, the solving of a crime, a murder, with only thumb prints to guide the searchers. It will be read with interest from the opening chapter.

Baseball For Vacationists

Baseball is invaluable to America. It thrills and so rests tired nerves. It brings the "shut-in" man into God's healing out-of-doors. While yelling he swallows great draughts of lung-expanding, purifying alrand forgets the fear of "taking cold." Baseball absolutely pulls the brain from business; it emphasizes the value of decency and gives, healthy and high toned recreation to millions. If kept clean, it's good-doing cannot be measured. Nothing is worth while that does not do that.

THE UNBELIEVABLENESS OF DEATH.

"As simple child that lightly draws its breath
And feels its life in every limb.

What should it know of death!"

—Wordsworth.

"Aways says in place "when I die" "If I die" Her explanation is that although in her mind she knows that she will die, she cannot seem to believe in her heart that this strauge thing will really come to her believe in her heart that this strauge thing will really come to her words when it contents that says and store in a cool, dark place six months belore, using. You will find many a half told tale to awaken your imagination.

But to return to the main theme. As we wandered through the quaint old burying ground, we came upon a stone marked "1812." The man whose name was upon it had died at the age of 80 after a good long life. And he had been dead one hundred years! Of course the same thought came into the minds of, both of us. "Just think, he has been dead and buried over a hundred years! Some day we, too, will have been dead a hundred years! Some day we, too, will have been dead a hundred years, and someone else will stand by our graves and read our names on the tomb stones."

An inevitable and tremendous thought! And yet it made so little impression upon us that in two or three minutes we were talking lightly of the most frivolous lopics.

You see we didn't believe it, at least not with the real belief that comes from the heart-rather than the mind.

"As a matter of fact," says Stevenson in Aes Triplex, "although few things are spoken of with more fearful whispering than this prospect of death, few have less influence on conduct under healthy circumstances." And he goes on to show that while we wonder how people who, live in cities built on the sides of flery, volcanic mountains can eat and drink and make merry, and think so little about their mortal condition, we are all very much like them. For though we live continually in the presence and possibility of death, yet as a matter of fact, we think surprisingly little about it.

Yes, when you come to think of it, the unbelievableness of death to the average person, in view of our daily acquaintance with that great fact, is one of the queer quirks of the human brain. Or may it not be something bigger and better,—a proof of our instinctive realization of our own immortality?

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am four-teen and a half years old. My mother is dead and I keep house for papa and my brothers. I expect to entertian several girl-friends at dinner in a short time. (1) Now I am by no means an expert cook and I shall be greatly pleased if you give me a few suggestions as to what to serve and the proper way to serve it. (2) What besides flowers can be used as a cen-ter piece? ter piece?
"THE LADY OF THE HOUSE."

"THE LADY OF THE HOUSE."

(1) Give them a simple dinner, little "Lady of the House," and serve it nicely and then you won't be all "flustrated and tuckered out." Start with a clear soup, with salty crackers or strips of toasted bread if you must have fish, serve that next, with point chips, thinly sliced bread and a relish (clive, pickles or such). After the fish comes the meat course. A roast of yeal would be nice, or you might have yeal cutlets, creamed new potatoes and any fresh vegetable in season—asparagus on toast would be nice. Dear Mrs. Thompson: Your heart and home problems have interested me so greatly of late that I cannot help putting faith into you and your work. (1) I am a girl of nineteen and have been quite intimate with a young man of twenty-two, of whom I think a great deal. Seems he does not feel as warm towards me as he used to. How can I regain his kind affection? Is it true that dark people will not agree? (3) How can I remove hair from face without harming the skin? season—asparagus on toast would be nice.

After the meat course comes the salad. This can be vegetable or fruit salad and should be very daintily served, with crackers. You can save work by serving the salad with the meat course if you wish.

Finally serve your cake and coffee, salted nuts or candy or ice cream or fruit. Clear each course from the table before you serve the next. Get one of your girl friends to help you.

(2) A fern would be pretty, with bright bows of ribbon stuck among the greenery. You might dress a pretty doll and prop her so she stands in the middle of the table, holding in her liand ribbon stramers reaching to each plate; at end of each streamer the place card or dinner favor.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am fitteen years of age and am five feet five inches tall and i weigh about 180 pounds. Am T well proportioned? (2) Do you think a boy of my age should take a young lady one year my junior to a monilight excursion? How is man always gets tired of a girl who is too free with him. GOOD THINGS FOR THE TABLE.

When a delicious cake for an important occasion is needed, here it is: Brownies Delight .- Make four layers of rich white cake and nut them together with the following fillings: Make boiled frosting of four cups of sugar, the whites of four eggs, cooking the sugar until it hairs. The frosting may be made in a large platter and then divided into four parts: Into the first part put a grated cocoanut and the pulp of an orange rubbed through a sieve; spread this on one layer. Every Day Talks For Every Day People ..

Anyone attending the exercises at our high school, cannot fall to be impressed with the amount of talent and training that is displayed by our young men and women who are this month finishing from this worthy institution.

We call them men and women, and yet, as we sit in the audience and listen to their really praiseworthy declamations and demonstrations it seems but yesterday that the same hoys and girls were racing past our doors with their Baldwin primer tucked under their arm, their baby faces alight with happy innocence.

Looking at them closely one decides they have not changed so very much. The starry-eyed girls looking erpectantly into the future and the stalwart hoys (should I call them young men?) all look as if they belong to the host that march under the banner emblazoned "beni-bid-bici."

The young people may justly be called our country's most valuable asset, the most precious possessions of many, many homes.

Right here one might indulge in sen-

Why Women Are Beardless. Among many savage nations it is the practice to pull out the hair on the lish crew and an American passenger face; by the roots, and especially is this the case with the women. The persistence in this practice throughout generations resulted in the weakening and final destruction of these organs in the skin which tend to produce hair, thus accounting for the general beardlessness of women.

REPORT OF AUDITORS SHOWS IMPROVEMENT IN CITY'S FINANCES

Treasurer Has in Working Funds $27, 000 More Than for Same Period in Past Year.

That the city finances are in a very favorable condition at the present time is the report of Messrs: H. S. Haggart and William McCue, who have just made a report to the city council of their findings. There is an increase of funds on hand for working purposes over last year of more than $27,000, and this does not include funds collected in the taxes of 1912 to retire bonds due in 1913, the several street improvement funds, school, library, or any of the funds set aside for definite purposes. The complete report of the auditors is as follows:

the Honoralbe Mayor and Council-nen of the City of Janesville:

We have made a thorough examination of the books and accounts of the City Treasurer for the period from July 1, 1912 to and including April 15, 1913, and we hereby certify:

That all monies shown to have been received have been accounted for and that we have found satisfactory vouch ers or evidence of payment for all dis-bursements.

Premium Teeth, Highest Grade Teeth, backed and hipped with gold. Pure Gold and Platinum Crowns: Plates three times Perfect fit of ho sale. All flat and irreg-ular shaped month fitted perfectly. Soft teeth filled with Gold and Tin Alloy, which preserves them longer and better than any other material. All badly decayed teeth can be saved by putting on Gold Collar and Crown. Removable Bridge Work without mutilating the adjoining teeth. Teeth made next two weeks at EXCURSION RATES.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

JUSTICE By Howard L. Rann.

JUSTICE is an expensive by product of the district court, and can be procured either from a judge or a jury. Time was when an aggreved party could secure justice by merely going out and beating up his fellow man, and then unfolding and then unfolding and the unfol a fact. If Justice would remove her blinders long enough to take a square look at some of the jury verdicts that have been pulled off in her name, she would fall on ther sword, and expire before anybody could resuscitate her with a supreme court decision. There are two kinds of justice legal and individual, Legal justice is an exciting pastime which shows the defendant just where he stands in the eyes of the plaintiffs witnesses. There is no place in the world where a stald business man can have a good reputation shot full of leaks where a state business man can have a good reputation shot full of leaks quicker than in a court room filled with incensed relatives of the garnishee. In order to secure legal justice it is necessary to have not only the law but the facts and evidence. and if a man has these on his side, to-gether with a brother-in-law on the jury, he will get satisfaction about the time his family begins to figure on his life insurance the time his family begins to figure on his life insurance. Individual justice, is that variety which puts a black eye on somebody and then walks up and pays $10 and costs without a whimper. There is a good deal of this kind of justice down south, where it sometimes becomes necessary to hold court in the shadow of a telephone pole. The only danger with individual justice is that the defendant is liable to shoot first.

If justice didn't squint so often in another and entirely different direction, there would be less demand for ion, there would be less demand for

PROLOGUE.

When a murder is committed there is invariably a motive. Sometimes it is obvious; sometimes its presence is masked behind a complexity of possibilities until it is well nigh impossible to disentangle the slender the motive is there. "Look for the woman," said Pere Tabaret, even began to find fault with the old is not always the obvious woman the club cutsine. nor the obvious motive that is responsible for a crime. Sometimes the underlying cause resis also guessed at a great deal more for on deeper reasons than are ap- gan to spring up that made guesswork parent even to the closest observer. Then only an accident can give a clew to the real crim- nected with Mr. Argyle, whom he inal. And so it is with "The treated with unfalling love and re-Argyle Case."

> CHAPTER I. The Murder.

PON a day James Argyle was an evening he was at his home, seemingly hale and happy. Upon a morning he was found of his rich library lying on his side with one hand gripping the table cover, the bosom of his evening shirt a glazed eyes staring at the ceiling. A chair near by was overturned, and some distance away lay a revolver. It was a plain murder. 🦂

The crime was discovered shortly after 7 o'clock in the morning, and by the evening papers were on the street with columns of picturesque detail and theory, for James Argyle was known from one end of Manhattan to the other. He was also known in San for dinner that night. Francisco and other places.

In the first place he was enormously wealthy. He had built a costly and ret dined with them and said that it not very small place on a street in New York where the price of a front foot would keep an ordinary family in comfort for a number of years. But beyond the mere fact of his riches here were other reasons.

He was probably sixty years old. though he never discussed his age with any one. He belonged to a few clubs and attended only one. This was in later years. Formerly he seemed fond of the society of men, but in the few years preceding his death he grew through the house the next morning.

and for several months before the terrible end he did quarrel with every

For years the firm of Tolworthy & Mead had looked after his legal needs, but the elder Mr. Tolworthy died, and old Mr. Argyle severed relations with the firm and retained an obscure attorney named James T. Hurley. He quarreled with his son almost conskein of fact from the warp and stantly, so that the young man, who woof of probability. But always rented a studio in Twenty-third street.

Much of this the newspapers learned and the rest they guessed at. They unnecessary.

There was one person intimately conspect. She was his adopted daughter, Miss Mary Mazuret. About her the newspaper reporters could learn little, excepting that she took the place of a natural daughter in the old man's life. What her real parentage was reabout his usual haunts. Upon mained a mystery. She and Bruce Argyle, the son, and the other members of the household refused absolutely to see reporters, so the reporters wrote on a Persian rug by the inlaid table the police for everything that the pothings that they didn't see and held up lice had learned.

This was not much. The murder was nearly a week old, and the mystery deep brick red, a small hole one inch seemed as far from solution as ever. to the left of the second stud, his But there was no lack of material for lively speculation.

Old Mr. Argyle had been known to quarret with his son frequently the past few months, and this fact was given due importance. He had been out for a motor ride through the park that afternoon with Miss Mazuret and seemed unusually happy and pleased when he returned. He had telephoned to his son and invited him to the house

After dinner the father and son had a long talk in the library. Miss Mazuwas a very happy party-that Mr. Argyle and his son were on an unusually friendly footing, and that the past differences seemed to have been forgotten. She denied that she knew what these differences might have been. She left Mr. Argyle and Bruce talking in the library and went up to ber

Inspector Duffy. In view of these facts, subjected Mr. Bruce Argyle to searching examination. The young man frankly admitted that the differences of opinion between bimself and his father had grown so acute that he felt it would he better for all concerned if he found quarters elsewhere. He did not harbor any ill feeling against his father on this account, he said. His father was growing old, was eccentric and extremely stubborn and set in his ways. It was simply a conflict of wills, and he had left to avoid a serious break that might have been the inspector asked. The young man smiled at the question. "I am an artist," he replied, "and so far unknown and unpaid. But my father, while he was determined to impose his will on every one about him,

Fifteen minutes later the reporters had most of the details of this examination, and the newspapers began to print long and circumstantial stories, which pointed in but, one directionthat Bruce Argyle must have had a band in the murder of his father. It was pointed out that there was no positive proof that he had left the house at the bour he named and nothing to show that he had gone to his studio. Also, there was nothing to show that if he had left the house he had not returned at a later hour.

.All of the servants had been examined, and, while they were greatly excited and distressed. they apparently knew nothing. The police had hopes that further and closer inquiries would reveal "susplcious facts on which to base an arrest." Inspector Duffy, while he would not go into details, in timated that there would be "sensational developments within a few Perseverance Key to Success.

In almost any narrow way of living a man's life may be exceedingly simple, but if he wishes to escape from this narrowness, unless circumstances are much in his favor, he has to blaze a pathway through all sorts of hind rances, and often very much uphill before he can get to the place of wider influence or outlook. It takes courage; it takes great perseverance; it takes an unconquerable hope to do this.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, June 12, 1873.—The remains of the unfortunate youth, son of C Wilcox of this city Were recovered from the river at five o'clock vesterday p. m. The body was only a few feet from the spot where the boy went down and remained in the water for two hours. He was unable to swim and his companions being all small boys were unable to make any effort toward his rescue. Gathering up his clothes, they went to Mr. Wilcox's stable, a distance of about half a mile and brought the drowned boy's father the information of the calamity. The depth of the river where he sank is about four feet. Charley would have been ten years of age on the twenty-ninth of July. He was a promising boy and a favorite with his companions. The funeral

PROFESSIONAL:
"Oh, haven't you got the nerve?" she cried.
"Yes," he answered in tone didactic.
For he was the dentist. She meant the nerve PROFESSIONAL Of the tooth he bad just extracted.
